Parking Meters — Here We Go

Story of the Day
This is a story from Roy Anderson, who got it from his father, the late Charles Anderson—and its origin goes back to the dim and time-dusted years when their home town of Spring Hill was a commercial center and Dooley's Ferry Landing was its port on the Red river for the Shreveport-New Orleans traffic.

There were no railroads, and not too many boats. But those early Americans knew their country, and the things they didn't know they speculated about. Take the case of the negro preacher who was addressing his Spring Hill congregation—

He was preaching on Eternity. "Brotheren and sistern," he said, "Eternity is a long time. I'll tell you how long Eternity is. If an English sparrow was to take a beakful of water out of the Pacific ocean and hop across the United States one hop a day, and spit it out in the Atlantic ocean, and then keep this up until he had put all the water of the Pacific ocean in the Atlantic ocean—Brotheren and sistern... that would be early morning in Eternity!"

Tuesday, May 16, is going to be a night fateful for something or other.

Rumblings are going on downtown regarding parking meters, petitions in their behalf have been submitted to the Hope City Council—and the council announced yesterday it would entertain personal appearances and petitions from both sides of the question the night of the 16th.

Which means that time is wearing on and we are getting close to a decision on parking meters.

This newspaper is for them.

The plain facts are that the people of Hope are using the downtown streets for all-day parking—when this is prohibited in every town that presumes to have traffic control and cares a continental about out-of-town shoppers.

The point should be emphasized, and re-emphasized, that the installation of parking meters doesn't mean a system to levy tolls for all-day parking. It means the prohibition of street-parking downtown entirely—except for the one or two hours allowed by the meter, for shopping purposes.

And this is as it should be. The townfolks of Hope have got to find out the street parking for their own vehicles. They already have in most towns. We're simply behind the times.

Put meters in Hope and off-the-street parking lots will be developed quickly enough.

More Railmen Idled by Strike of Firemen

Chicago, May 12 — (AP) — More thousands of railroad workers joined the ranks of the idle today — laid off by the deadlocked firemen's strike against four major carriers.

Workers in many other key industries also were getting layoff notices and others were threatened with forced idleness. The three-day-old strike by 18,000 firemen appeared to have made idle nearly 500,000 workers already, including some 150,000 rail employees.

There wasn't a sign of peace in the nation's biggest rail strike May 11.

There was, however, the first flareup of violence on some of the strikebound lines.

Shortly after two freight trains were reported ambushed and fired upon near Knoxville, Tenn., the Southern railway lines suspended all operations in the area. A spokesman said the move was made to protect the road's employees. An acting fireman on one train was shot in the arm. Pickets outside the Knoxville switch yards denied they fired any shots, but said they were stoned.

There were other minor disturbances on the strikebound New York Central lines in two Indiana cities.

The Southern, the New York Central and a third struck carrier — the Santa Fe — are operating only emergency skeleton service.

The Pennsylvania, struck west and north of Harrisburg, is not operating in the strikebound area.

With operations drastically curtailed, the Pennsylvania issued layoff slips to 85,000 employees. The New York Central, which said 23,000 already are idle, planned to furlough another 25,000 over the weekend.

Southern railway estimated 18,000 of its workers have been forced into idleness by the strike. The Santa Fe furloughed several thousand as it closed its shops, but it did not announce the number of idle.

The railroads again refused to accept what the rail union described as a modified demand of its original proposal: The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen struck to enforce its demand for a second fireman on multiple unit diesel locomotives.

The carriers rejected the demand, as did two presidential fact-finding boards.

Believes the Housewife Can Easily Break Up Most of Nationwide Gambling Rings

By HAL BOYLE

New York — (AP) — There is a way to break up the nationwide gambling ring.

The American housewife can do it. She can succeed where the cops and politicians seem to have failed.

And she can make a neat bit of pin money for herself in doing it, too.

How? Well, my theory is simple. It is based on taking the gambling out of gambling. You can't beat the horses, girls, but there is a possible way to beat the bookies. And if you can beat the bookies — you can break up organized illegal gambling.

A suburban housewife here has shown the way to do it. Under the law you can sue to recover money paid to settle gambling debts. And that's just what Mrs. Hannan S. Kartiganer did. She sued H. J. Bender for $11,195 she claimed her husband lost to him in horse race bets three years ago. And a gentlemanly jury of eleven men and one woman return a verdict in her favor.

Although Bender insisted he himself was no bookmaker but a businessman, the decision disclosed a fascinating way in which determined ladies might put the knuckle on men who, beyond evil, are professional bookies.

Here, for example, is one possibility:

A group of 100 housewives, outraged because their husbands keep bringing home paychecks full of gambling holes, hold a rummage sale and an ice cream social. They raise $1,000.

Three of the girls take the $1,000 to the biggest bookie in town and lay it on the nose for Plug Ugly, 100-to-1 shot, to win the filla.

If lightning should strike Plug Ugly and he comes in ahead, each of the 100 girls collects $1,000 — enough for a car coat. And the bookie has a broken heart.

The next day the girls put $5,000 on Sadfoot, another 100-to-1 huffer, to breeze through in the fourth. If he loses, the girls promptly file suit against the bookie. And if all 100 of the women show up in court with their 275 children, in rags, won't the jury make the bookie hand back the $5,000.

So the next day the girls, maybe working through a couple of male stewards this time, bet the $5,000 on still another 100-to-1 shot. If he leads the field to the wire, they collect a half million bucks — or the bookie commits suicide. If their horse loses, they haul the bookie right back into court.

This "break the bookies" program could sweep the ladies clubs of the nation like wildfire. It has two things women love: (1) a moral purpose, and (2) a chance to make some money.

It beats radio giveaway shows all hollow, because no sponsor can dish out prizes equal to the millions hidden by wealthy bookies in their safe deposit boxes.

If American wives cooperated in this you-can't-lose-from-winning venture, most bookies in six months would be back pitching pennies against each other for a living.

The only flaw I can see in the whole scheme is that women, after all, are human beings, too — in their way. When they start playing the horses they act just like men. They brag about their winnings and hide their losses. And before long they'd be secretly betting against each other, and it would be the bookies' wives who'd be buying the fur coats.

Gambling is like any other disease. If you don't expose yourself to the germ, you don't get infected. But is a wonderful plan, isn't it?

Russian New Boss of Pole Government

Warsaw, Poland, May 12 — (AP) — Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky, former Soviet army commander now in charge of Poland's military forces, has been named to the Polish Communist party politburo — this country's most powerful political body.

Announcement of Rokossovsky's elevation last night followed forecasts of a shakeup in Communist party leadership. The unconfirmed reports circulating here ranged from rumors of sharp criticism of prominent party members to wild stories of purges in the office.

The former Red army chieftain, in addition to heading Poland's army, is a member of the state council (inner cabinet). His new appointment would appear to give him an even louder voice in Polish government.

Some diplomatic observers predicted further changes in the present composition of the Polish government would be announced shortly.

He said this area included California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona.

U. S. Communist Leader Ordered to Jail at Once

Washington, May 12 — (AP) — Communist Leader Eugene Dennis today was ordered to jail immediately for contempt of congress in 1947.

Federal Judge David A. Pine directed that Dennis, secretary general of the American Communist party, start at once to serve a one-year prison sentence.

Dennis had asked the court to delay the commitment until June 22. On that date the Court of Appeals in New York is scheduled to hear an appeal by Dennis and 10 other Communists convicted on conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the government.

In 1947, Dennis was convicted by a federal court here on charge of contempt growing out of his refusal to testify before the house un-American activities committee.

Dennis appealed the conviction. The Supreme court upheld it last May 1.

While the appeal in the contempt case was pending, the government had brought the case against Dennis and 10 other Communist leaders in New York.

Dennis was given a five-year sentence on his conviction in New York. He is free under bond pending hearing of the appeal.

Dennis acted as his own attorney in the New York case. Joseph Forer, his attorney in the contempt case, argued to Judge Pine that Dennis should have a chance to prepare his appeal in the New York case and for that reason should not go to jail now.

Judge Pine told him: "If I followed your suggestion a criminal could stay out of jail forever by committing another crime and then representing himself."

Dennis was in the court room. The justice department will decide later where he will serve his sentence.

U.S. marshals took Dennis from the court room to the District of Columbia jail. He will remain there until the justice department's decision as to where he shall serve his term.

S. Task Force Heads for Orient

San Francisco, May 12 — (AP) — The task force of 21 American warships headed west for the Orient to relieve ships of the seventh fleet. The main purpose of the group will be to show American flag along the coast of Asia.

The carrier Valley Forge headed for the sea. It has aboard 33 jet fighters, the first of the speedy American planes to be shown in the Orient. There are 47 other planes aboard.

Adm. John M. Hoskins will command the task force, which will include two Snorkel-type submarines — the kind that can operate underwater indefinitely.

Besides the Valley Forge, other ships in the task force are the battleships Jena and Rochester, the transport USS Curtiss and the transport USS Wainwright, the destroyer USS Dahlgren, USS Brush, USS A. A. Smith, USS Madrox, USS Moore, USS Edwards, USS Shelton, the destroyer USS Fletcher and USS Radford, the minesweepers USS Remora, USS Catfish and USS Gato, and the oilers USS Navesota and USS Asanuma.

Vice Adm. Calvin T. Durgin, commander of the Pacific fleet, said all major strengthening of the Pacific fleet "for the immediate future" had been completed.

The Valley Forge will relieve the carrier USS Boxer in the Orient. The Boxer and other ships of the Seventh fleet will return to the West Coast in June.

1. When time permits, go to a storm cellar, cave or underground excavation, which should have an air outlet to help equalize the air pressure.
2. In Open Country:
Move at right angles to the tornado's path. An automobile can often outrun a tornado. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in the nearest depression of the field, or street.
3. If on a river bluff, the side of the hill facing the tornado is often required for divorce by separation alone from three to two.
4. Another approved recommendation was for a constitution amendment to dispense with the present requirement that jury verdicts in all criminal cases be unanimous. Under the proposal nine or more of the 12 jurors could return a verdict except in cases involving a possible death penalty. Majority verdicts already are allowed in civil cases in Arkansas state courts.
5. Associate Justice Robert A. Lee of the Arkansas Supreme court told the Junior Bar section at its annual banquet last night that attorneys should keep up with current events — ranging from local to international — to properly practice law.

DOROTHY DIX Right to Propose

Dear Miss Dix: I am a widow 26 years old with a 5-year-old son and hold down a good job that may some day be a big one. I am very much in love with a man whose interests are similar to mine and feel that we would be very happy together, and that I could help him both socially and in his work. I know he is very fond of me, but he is wary of women. We see each other frequently and he telephones me every day, but it goes no farther. How can I make him propose to me?

L. M.

Answer: Telling a man to the altar is a difficult task. For the men who are averse to marriage are generally a wary lot who scent danger in a woman's every move and they develop an ability to walk with an uncanny adroitness among the best-laid traps.

Call His Bluff
In your particular case I should think the best way to bring the man to the proposing point would be by calling his bluff, so to speak, and giving him to understand that he must either put up or shut up. Turn the cold shoulder on him. Withdraw from his society. Make him miss you. And if that doesn't cause him to realize that you are necessary to his happiness, nothing will.

You see, no reason why men fight shy of the altar is because they can have the pleasure of women's society without marrying them and assuming the responsibility of matrimony. A man can fasten himself upon a pretty and clever young woman, such as you are. He can have her for a chum with whom to go to places and do things. He can tell her all of his troubles and get the moral support of her sympathy and understanding without tying himself down to her or assuming her board bill and shopping ticket.

Your predicament, which is shared by thousands of other women, calls attention again to the injustice of the convention that puts a taboo upon women doing their courting openly. Certainly it is just as important to a woman to get the husband she wants as it is to a man to get the wife he desires, and it would save a lot of heartbreak and disappointment and weary waiting if a girl could go up to the lad she fancied and ask him about it matrimonially speaking.

And men would always have the veto power.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a girl of 18. I know my husband loves me very much, but he refuses to give me a personal allowance and I feel like a beggar when I ask him for money for such feminine necessities as powder and lipstick, to say nothing of clothes. I do without things I need rather than ask him. I envy the girls in his employ who can look forward to a pay envelope on Saturday night.

Answer: I have written on this safer than away from the tornado.

3. In City Or Town:
Seek shelter, preferably in a structural-steel building.
- Do Not Approach Windows
In homes, the southwest basement corner offers greater safety in a frame house than in a brick or stone house. If time permits, electricity and fuel lines should be shut off. Windows on the north and east sides of the house may also be opened to help reduce damage to the building.
- Standing against the inside wall on a lower floor of an office building offers some protection.
4. In Schools:
In congested city areas, follow procedure for office buildings. In rural districts, remove children and teachers to a ravine or ditch, which will offer more protection than a school building.
5. In Factories And Industrial Plants:
On receiving a tornado warning, post a lookout to warn of the tornado's approach. Advance preparation should be made for shutting off electrical circuits and fuel lines if the tornado approaches the plant. Workers should be moved to sections of the plant offering the greatest protection.
6. Go Out!
Do not become excited. People have been killed by running into streets and by turning back into the path of a tornado.

very nice girl through my husband. She works at the same place that he does. I have taken a great fancy to her and she comes to our house once every week for dinner and considers both of us her good friends. People are beginning to tell me that she is after my husband and that I am a fool for letting this go on. Don't you think it possible for a husband and wife who love each other deeply to have a girl friend without the world thinking something wrong about it? What can I say to these meddling matrons?

MRS. M. L. K.

Answer: There is nothing you can say to them that will do any good because they get a delight out of scandal-mongering and enjoying the worst construction you can put on a situation. The wise course for you to pursue is just not to notice them. You can't possibly please all your friends and acquaintances, so the best thing to do is just to please yourself and let them go hang.

But don't let them break up your friendship with the nice girl, because you get pleasure out of that, and if she is a lonely girl without any home except a hall bedroom or a boarding house, you are giving her a great pleasure by having her to a family dinner once a week.

For a woman to think that she can protect her husband and keep him safe by never inviting an attractive girl to her house is silly in a world which is full of women and in which he works side by side with girls every day. Temptation is about him on every side and he is faithful to his wife, or a philanthropist, according to his nature and not because his wife watches him or quarantines the house against pretty ladies.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a man in my late forties. I married a fine, sweet girl, but for some unknown reason I was never true to her. Every time my wife would forgive me and take me back. She rarely kisses me now and goes about so quiet and with such a hurt expression that it troubles me. I have neglected her and wrecked her life, but now I would give everything in the world if she could love me again as of old. Do you think she can?

When Louille set down the tray beside her bed, Clemency awoke and sat up with a start.

"Baba?"

"Nurse says she is still sleeping. She has had a wonderful night. Praise be to Allah, she will get well," said Louille joyously. "The doctors both have gone."

"What time is it?" Clemency glanced at her clock. "Louille! I should have been called before this!"

"No, Sitt. The Sidi Amberley's orders. And you are to eat your breakfast in bed."

Clemency sank back on her pillows, still drowsy from the effects of the sleeping tablet she had been given last night.

The sunlight flooded the room like a benediction—Baba was going to get well. And then she remembered why this heavy ache lay at her heart, why it would be worse before it ever eased.

Nothing of what had happened during this last 48 hours had changed her own problem. She still had to give Piers back his ring, and tell him she was going away. It was useless to think things could ever be the same between them again—loving him so desperately only made them worse. She might forgive what he had done to her—but nothing could undo what he had done to Jon. What Syrie had made him do!

She clenched her hands until the nails dug into the palms. Last night when she came to bed she had wept, but the tears were out of her utter weariness, and her relief over Baba. Her own tragedy was too deep for tears.

Luncheon was over when at last she emerged from her room to go in search of Piers, but he did not seem to be anywhere about, and it was Syrie she found.

This morning only the shadows around Syrie's eyes which her make-up did not quite succeed in hiding, betrayed anything of what she had gone through. When Clemency found her, standing looking out on to the veranda, she appeared as exquisitely groomed as ever, in one of the thick white silk dresses she was so fond of, her shilling hair piled high, lipstick and nail varnish perfectly matched.

How much real feeling is there in her? Clemency wondered with a bitterness that would not be repressed.

When Syrie glanced around, and, seeing her, came back into the room, there was an embarrassment that was quite new in her manner.

"I was waiting for Piers," she said. "I think—he is with Jon."

It's dreadful to hate anybody after what we have all just been through, thought Clemency. But the human heart has its passions, and there are limits to human endurance; it was perhaps a little unfair to blame herself.

She controlled her voice with an effort. "Then I will leave you. I was looking for him, but—what I have to say can wait."

But as she turned to go, Syrie spoke. "It's wonderful about Baba."

"Very wonderful."

"Jon and I are planning to take her to the sea as soon as she is well enough. Perhaps—over to Southern France. It's an ideal part of the world to live. And if I can get someone reliable to look after her—"

Though she tried to hide it, some of the surprise Clemency felt showed in her face. "She will need a lot of love," she said. "She will be a long time getting better and convalescing, and—she is bound to get spoiled. I hope you will find someone who—loves her a lot."

"I shan't get anyone she loves as much as she loves you," said Syrie frankly. "Or who manages her as well." She paused and added after a moment: "You will think I am very unpertinent if I try to make the remainder of her life happy."

ask you what you were waiting to say to Piers."

Clemency felt herself freeze up. "If you don't mind, I would rather not discuss it."

"There is no need to," said Syrie. "Here is Piers, and—I think—I know he will have something to say to you." And then as Clemency moved swiftly towards the second exit from the room she exclaimed sharply: "Piers! Don't let Clemency go."

HE reached out, and taking Clemency's arm, drew her back. And so she stood, Syrie facing her, Piers on the other side, her heart beating furiously, but determined to save herself the indignity of a further attempt to escape.

"Piers," Syrie told him, "you have something to tell Clemency."

"He has nothing to tell me that I don't already know," said Clemency.

"Oh yes, he has—a lot," Syrie assured her, and with her eyes on Piers: "Has Jon spoken to you?"

"Yes."

"Then tell Clemency the truth. You shouldn't have trusted me at all," Syrie shrugged. "I'm a born liar when it suits. Go on, Piers. Tell her what I did to you and all the rest of it. She'll believe you now. Jon will have told you that I let her think what he said to her was true."

She turned her glance to Clemency's white, stricken face. "There's one truth I can tell. I loved Piers—I wouldn't have stopped at anything to make what I wanted you to believe come true. But he loathes me! I wanted to punish him for making me stay here. Months ago I made Jon believe what you believed. I suppose I wanted to punish Jon too."

"But something odd happened to me when Baba fell ill. I promised myself that if she got better, I'd tell the truth—make it all right between you and Piers."

As she spoke Clemency realized that Syrie Amberley was unchanged. She was not repentant, only keeping a bargain with Fate.

President Roosevelt's Board said—

President Truman's Board said—

Still the leaders of the Railroad

Firemen's Union say—

"STRIKE!"

This ridiculous strike is an affront to every citizen of the nation. It's not for more money. It's not because of hours. It's only for soft feather-bedding spots for additional unnecessary firemen to go along in diesel locomotives just for the ride. A leading liberal newspaper calls the demands of the union leaders "horse-feathers"!

The reckless leaders of the firemen's union want to force down the throats of the railroads and the public a ridiculous "make-work" proposal which has been twice ruled out by Presidential Fact Finding Boards duly appointed under the provisions of the Railway Labor Act.

This demand of union leaders for additional and unnecessary firemen to ride in diesel locomotives was rejected—after months of hearings—by a Board appointed by President Roosevelt in 1943.

It was again rejected in 1949 by a Board appointed by President Truman.

Recent meetings with the National Mediation Board have brought no change in the attitude of the union dictators.

Union Leaders Defy Intent of Law

The union leaders helped write the Railway Labor Act. Yet in an attempt to jam through this scheme of pure "feather-bedding" by leading the members of their union out on strike and threatening paralysis to large areas of the nation, they are defying the spirit and intent of the very law which they helped to create.

This strike is not for higher wages. It is a strike to force the railroads to employ many more thousands of firemen who are not needed! It would be indefensible waste. The railroads have refused to place this additional and unnecessary burden on the public.

But more important than any other consideration, is the action of these few irresponsible union leaders in seeking to force a crippling strike upon the

This strike is one of the silliest strikes in history!

What are these reckless union leaders trying to do? They seek to cause thousands of their members to strike, and throw hundreds of thousands of other employees on and off the railroads out of employment, with loss of pay to them and their families, plus a severe blow to industry and the citizens of the nation.

What's the strike all about? If the union has its way—what happens? The present members of the union won't get one cent more pay. They will merely have been assessed for a costly and indefensible drive in an attempt to provide more dues-paying members for the union by creating "feather-bedding" jobs for additional and unnecessary firemen.

This is certainly one of the silliest strikes in history!

nation for their own selfish purposes.

There is no other possible answer to such a demand but "No!"

The railroads in making such a reply believe they have the whole-hearted support of the people in whose interest they are willing to fight this out, despite the loss and inconvenience that all will suffer.

It is time to put an end to such un-American demands.

It was characteristic of Syrie to make a bargain even with the fates and expect to get the best of it. She had promised herself that if Baba got well, she would make everything right between Clemency and Piers. This time, though, she was at least ready to keep her share of the bargain.

She left the room, and Clemency and Piers, left together, regarded each other for a moment in silence. Then:

"What did she say to you?" Piers demanded.

"That—that you had been engaged before she married Jon. That after you brought them here you two had still—still loved each other. That it had been too strong for you, but it was all over."

"She let you believe that what Jon had told you was true?" She caught her breath. "It broke my heart, but how could I imagine that any woman would confess such a thing if it were not true?"

"It seems that neither you nor I understand a certain type of woman, though, goodness knows, I should have found out something about Syrie by now." He glanced at Clemency's left hand. "So you took off my ring."

"She slipped her fingers into the pocket of her frock. 'I brought it for you.' Piers took it without a word. 'Did you really think I was capable of taking Jon's wife?'"

"That was what nearly killed me. Oh, Piers!" But he did not touch her, and her outstretched hands fell to her sides.

She seated herself in one corner of a deep settee, her troubled eyes on his face. "Piers, must you talk about it? Does it matter any more?"

"Yes," he said. "Let us get it told and over. Let us face the fundamental facts from which everything else has sprung. First, that once I loved Syrie very deeply and desperately. Second, that whatever Syrie says, she is incapable of loving anyone.

2. Give the FEPC, meaning a government agency, power to compel an employer to stop discriminating in hiring workers.

The southern Democrats don't want this bill passed. To stop the rest of the senate from approving, they're willing to go on and on, to talk themselves into exhaustion with a filibuster.

So long as this filibuster, or marathon talk, continues it can block all senate action on the FEPC and on all other senate work, too. Then—and this is the aim of the filibusters—in order to get on with the rest of their work, the other senators will abandon the FEPC bill.

But can a minority—the southern Democrats—are in a minority—block the work of the rest of the senate?

Yes, unless the rest are willing to vote for a thing called "cloture," which means: Shutting-off-a-filibuster.

1. Make it unlawful for an employer to refuse to hire a jobseeker because of his color, religion or race. And—

Compromise Sought on Foreign Aid

Washington, May 12—(AP)—

makers adjusting differences between senate and house foreign aid bills sought a compromise today on how far to go in launching a program of American aid to underdeveloped areas.

The cost of President Truman's point four program, along with another feature of the program calling for government guarantees to American investors abroad, were reported to be the last stumbling blocks facing the senate house conference committee on foreign aid.

The committee yesterday approved a $3,000,000 fund to help the people of Communist China weather what President Truman has called that nation's "winter of famine in 100 years."

Both the house and senate foreign aid bills contain a number of projects the biggest of which is a $2,950,000,000 third-year European recovery program. The conference expected to finish their work on the big bill today.

senators, whether or not all 96 are on the floor, vote for cloture. So cloture is much harder to get than a simple majority vote on a bill. That's not all.

In the senate there's a difference between a "motion" and a "measure." A "measure" is simply a bill, like the FEPC bill. And the measure and motion go like this:

Before the senate can consider a bill, some senator has to make a motion to bring up the bill for consideration. If a simple majority of those present vote approval of the motion, then the senate can consider the bill. Then, after debate, the senate can vote on the bill itself.

But, until a motion to bring up a bill is approved, there can be neither consideration nor action on the bill. And this is where life for the senators gets difficult. Take the FEPC bill again:

The motion is made to bring up the FEPC bill. Immediately the southern senators begin their filibuster, not on the bill itself, but on the motion to bring it up. The purpose: To prevent the senate from even voting on the motion to bring up the bill.

If, finally, the rest of the senators vote closure on the filibuster, they then vote on the motion to bring up the bill. As soon as the motion is approved, then the senators start their filibuster all over again but this time against the bill itself. The purpose: Now it's to prevent the senate from voting on the bill.

And this filibuster against the bill can't be stopped unless more two-thirds, or 64, of the senators vote cloture. If the senate approves the second cloture, then, when the regular debate over the senate votes on the FEPC bill, on the bill itself, a simple majority of those present less 64 of the total number of 96 is necessary.

This can be done any time two-thirds of the total number of senators — 64 of the 96 — want to vote for cloture.

If you read that in a hurry, it sounds easy. It isn't.

In the first place, few senators relish voting for cloture. Some day they may want to filibuster on something. They don't want cloture used on them.

In the second place, that vote of 64 out of 96 is no cinch to get. For example:

A simple majority vote of just those present at voting time is all that is needed when the senate votes on a bill.

If only 70 senators were on the floor at voting time and 36 voted for and 34 against, the bill would pass.

But if a vote on cloture comes up and only the same 70 senators are on the floor and 36 vote for cloture, 34 against, there's no cloture.

There can't be any cloture unless 64 of the total number of 96 is necessary.

Travelers Finally Win a Game

When a baseball team loses 21 games in a row—and Little Rock has just finished proving it can be done—that team doesn't suffer in conclusion.

The entire league — in this case the Southern association — watches unhappily as the entertainment dollar goes to the movies instead of baseball.

Little Rock's long spell of victory defying baseball ended last night in Nashville with a shaky 6-5 win which a gathering of 887 fans paid money to watch.

Wednesday night only 1,232 were present in Nashville to watch the historic record breaking 21st straight defeat of the Trav.

Little Rock managed to win a game when Vol reliever Tony Jacobs opened the ninth inning by walking two Trav.

Hal Simpson singled to fill the bases. Good hearted Jacobs proceeded to walk another man and give the Trav a free run.

Then came the blow that broke the string. Jack Sandor, an ex-Nashville player — singled to drive in the tying and winning runs.

Lou Lombardo pitches for the Trav tonight against Spencer Davis in Nashville.

As Little Rock hogged the spotlight with the string snapper, the first division of the Southern got another musing. Mobile went back into the lead with a 4-3 victory from Birmingham and Atlanta slipped to second after losing to New Orleans 8-5. Birmingham fell back to third place.

Chattanooga and Memphis played a sober 4-3 game which went Chattanooga's way.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

New York, May 12 — (P) — Steve Owen, the football Giants' coach, "couldn't be disturbed" in his movie cubicle. But when he emerged, trailed by assistants Al Sherman and Ed Kolman, he grinned sheepishly and admitted: "I was showing these kids how Tuffy Leemans used to play."

To not-too-stout Steve, they don't come much better than Leemans, and he's just hoping Travis Tidwell will turn out to be the same kind of player.

"Tuffy wasn't so fast, but he was shifty and smart," Steve recalled. "He used every blocker, and even when they didn't block for him, he'd use them as shields."

They said he couldn't pass, but he was always throwing those touchdown passes — about ten a season. Tidwell has a lot of savvy, too; he's played a lot of football. And you never know what he's going to do, either.

Gay Technicolor Musical Features June Haver

For Miss Haver, "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady" is an important vehicle for the singing and dancing talents she possesses, and in Technicolor she has no peer for beauty in Hollywood, this being her 13th consecutive film in the color medium.

Also in the cast are the popular Cuddie Sakall and James Barton. The latter created the famous Jeeter Lester role in "Tomb Raider."

David Butler handled the direction for Warner Bros. while LeRoy Prinz staged the many dance numbers in the film.

Freedom From Fear Object of All Laws

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, May 11 — (P) — If you were a pre-historic man, living alone, you'd have absolute freedom, except freedom from fear.

There'd be no laws since there'd be no tribe or society to make laws. You could steal any stranger's food or kill him.

You'd be free to do it, without fear of punishment. Unfortunately for you, any stranger like you would be free to do the same to you.

So never for one moment of your life would you be free of the fear of what some stranger might do to you. This would be pretty shaky living.

When people began to live in tribes, they saw this and drew up rules and laws to make life longer and more livable.

These rules and laws were simply an agreement, or social contract, by a lot of people who wanted to live together without fear of damage.

Then, for instance, they'd make a law against murder. After that, everyone knew if he violated the law he'd be punished.

This was intended to make life safer for everyone. But — the people who agreed to this agreed to give up a certain freedom — freedom to kill.

In return, though, they got a new freedom — freedom from fear of being killed.

When the American people decided to live together, they, too, agreed to a social contract, called the U. S. constitution.

This guaranteed them certain freedoms and rights, such as freedom of speech and the right to trial by jury.

Then to make living in America better, congress and the states passed laws, lists of "do's" and "don't's" for Americans.

Some of those laws take away from individual freedoms. For instance, laws against murder, disturbing the peace, theft.

Their purpose is to protect against abuses of freedom. At the same time it is the purpose of the constitution to see that:

As many people as possible have as much freedom as possible while still keeping the American form of government intact.

It is the unending job of the Supreme court to decide what is in accord with the constitution and what is contrary to it.

In many such judgments on the cases which come before it, the court must protect the rights and freedoms of minorities while protecting the rights and freedoms of the majority. It's no cinch.

Justice Jackson said this week: "The court's day-to-day task is to reject as false, claims in the name of civil liberty which, if granted, would paralyze or impair authority to defend existence of our society, and to reject as false claims in the name of security which would undermine our freedoms and open the way to oppression."

And Chief Justice Vinson said that if constitutional government like ours is to survive "it must have power to protect itself against unlawful conduct. Freedom of speech thus does not comprehend the right to speak on any subject at any time."

This is why every decision of the court on freedom of speech, since all of us have such a stake in it, gets so much attention.

It is also why the decisions of the court — since it's made up of human beings — are examined so closely to be sure that even with the best intentions it doesn't take away unnecessarily one additional freedom from anyone.

Such a decision, while appearing to be good today, may weaken the structure in a way that can't be foreseen and serve as a pre-saw for some future court to approve a law that cripples freedom badly.

It is not hard to imagine — if this government and its constitution stand another 1,000 years — that many of the freedoms which seem so solid today may vanish through new laws and new court decisions.

You can see why: Time and situations change. New laws constantly are being passed to meet both. These call for new court decisions to meet new realities and adapt the constitution to the necessities of new times.

Suit Against A&P Baseless Says Judge

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. today revealed for the first time that, contrary to the claims of the anti-trust lawyers, a company at Danville, Ill., in the words of the presiding judge, could not be the basis for the current suit to destroy the A & P.

In a nationwide newspaper advertisement, A & P disclosed that Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, who presided over the 1948 Danville case, said shortly thereafter in a letter explaining his decision: "I have not condemned the A & P system. I have not made a finding which could be the basis for a suit of dissolution."

The letter contradicted the repeated claims of the anti-trust lawyers that the same Danville decision is the basis of their present suit in federal court at New York to compel A & P to dispose of its seven retail store divisions and its manufacturing plants, and to dissolve the Atlantic Commission Company, its fresh fruit and vegetable buying subsidiary.

"So now," the advertisement said, "we have the anti-trust lawyers saying that their suit to dissolve A & P is based on Judge Lindley's decision while Judge Lindley himself says his decision could not be the basis for a suit of dissolution."

A & P explained that in the Danville case it was the dual role played by the Atlantic Commission company in buying produce for A & P and selling produce to the trade for growers that Judge Lindley objected to and which he said was the real basis of his decision.

Since then, the food chain disclosed, ACCO has discontinued this dual role even though it has been licensed for many years by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to act as both a buyer and a seller of produce. The ad said ACCO now buys produce only for A & P.

"In other words, we stopped doing the thing which Judge Lindley said put us in violation of the Sherman Act," the ad stated.

"What, then, is the real reason why the anti-trust lawyers want to destroy this company, which for 9 years has pioneered the methods of distribution which have given the American people more good food for their money?"

Today's advertisement reviewed in detail the Danville case and the charges against the company. Previous ads in the series discussed other times when the anti-trust lawyers made serious and damaging charges against A & P which federal courts decided were not true.

AIC Trackmen to Battle for Honors

Little Rock, May 12 — (P) — Defending champion Arkansas State was expected to have strong competition from at least three other teams in the Arkansas Intercollegiate conference track and field meet here today.

These were Hendrix, State Teachers and Ouachita.

Five other teams were entered for a nine field total.

Most conference records were expected to stand, but Ivan Grove, the veteran Hendrix coach, thought State's Maurice Miller might better the 440-yard dash mark with his own Dick Gooden a possibility for a new district mark.

Preliminaries were to start this morning. Finals will start at 8 p. m.

Also scheduled here for today was completion of the twice-postponed AIC tennis tournament.

The vampire bat legend of the old world is remarkable because real-life bats that suck blood are confined to tropical America.

Big Three May Ease Controls in W. Germany

London, May 12 — (P) — The Western powers today debated unfreezing some of their occupation controls on West Germany.

Easing of restrictions came up for discussion as the Big Three foreign ministers began the second session of the 11 three-day meeting on how to bolster Western defenses against the threat of Russian Communist expansion.

The American and British delegations presented proposals for turning over to the Bonn government more control of West Germany's internal and foreign affairs.

An authoritative source said the proposals did not contemplate formal revision of the present occupation statute, but rather a Big Three agreement not to exercise full statute controls pending formal review of the occupation powers this fall.

Also on the agenda was consideration of France's proposal for merging the French and German industry potential. It was expected that the German problems would occupy the foreign ministers most of the day.

The initiative for relaxing some of the German controls came almost entirely from the American and British sides. They disagreed on some points.

Joseph Smith, first president of the Latter-day Saints (Mormon) church, was born at Sharon, Vt., in 1805.

gineers and Mr. Deese with M. L. Crist Co. of Little Rock were present and spoke to the council regarding the proposed extension of water and sewer lines.

The council approved the application of Robert A. Gammill to operate a taxicab and passed a resolution accepting the territory annexed to the city of Prescott by order of County Court of Nevada county on March 27, 1950.

Bills were read and they were approved. Other routine matters were discussed but were tabled until next meeting night which will be May 15, 1950.

No other business to come before the council was on motion adjourned.

'Great Lover' With Bob Hope at Rialto

Sporting a profile that strongly resembles a ski jump and boasting an air of suave sophistication that leaves women weak — with laughter — Bob Hope blithely plays the title role in Paramount's hilarious new comedy, "The Great Lover," which opens Sunday at the Rialto Theatre.

Romantic Robert's qualifications as the world's most irresistible male, according to the mimeographed list he distributes, include the attributes of every lover from Romeo to Boyer. Actually, he's the answer to a maiden's prayer only if she's praying for laughs.

Having been paired with his favorite blonde, Madeleine Carroll, and his favorite brunette, Dorothy Lamour, lover-boy Hope is so-sweet with his favorite redhead, ravishing Rhonda Fleming, in "The Great Lover," said to be one of his funniest comedies.

Roland Young leads the featured cast which includes Roland Culver, Jim Backus, George Reeves and Richard Lyon.

Bob plays chaperone to a group of Boy Foresters who are returning to America aboard a luxury liner after a bicycle tour through France. He doesn't object when they forbid him to smoke or drink, but he almost commits mayhem when they threaten to interfere in his romantic affairs.

There are some things even Hope won't tolerate, especially from defenseless children.

Musically, "The Great Lover" features two new tunes by Livingston and Evans, composers of "Buttons and Bows" and "To Each His Own," and "Golden Earrings," sung by Bob and Rhonda, the songs are "Lucky Us" and "A Thousand Violins."
